EXACTING AESTHETIC

In its passenger transport version, the new Daily has not changed any of the qualities of robustness, functionality and long operating life which made its predecessors so successful. Where it differs from earlier models, though, is in the radically innovative design, increased engine performance and introduction of the latest in new technology.

A true work of art

Modern and functional, the new Daily is also remarkable for the exacting aesthetic demands that drove the design process. Its outstanding formal beauty did not come about by chance, of course, since this exceptional utility vehicle was designed by one of the greatest industrial and automotive stylists of the 20th century, Giorgetto Giugiaro.

Ergonomic requirements

Entirely redesigned, the ergonomic interior of the new Daily cab is a dream come true for drivers. There is a new driver's seat, which is more enveloping and more comfortable. The gear stick is integrated in the dash panel, creating more space and therefore easing movement within the cab. Among the other equipment aimed at improving life behind the wheel, the driver will appreciate the new AGile[®] electronically-controlled automatic gearbox which dispenses with the need to declutch on every gear change. He will similarly enjoy the GPS satellite navigation and the speed limiter.

Performance and safety programmed in

The new Daily wins in performance terms with more torque and a Euro 4 engine available in 146 or 176 HP. The braking equipment has also been improved with the introduction of ventilated discs on the front, and larger diameter discs on both front and rear. This results in a shorter braking distance than that of a good number of touring vehicles. The new Daily also comes with cutting edge active safety features such as ABS antilock brakes, ASR antiskid, and ESP electronic stabilisation protection. In terms of passive safety, the new Daily offers a driver's airbag and, depending on the version, one for the passenger too.

Daily à la carte

With the choice of wheelbase lengths, different vehicle heights and a range of doors, Irisbus Iveco proposes the new Daily for all type of transport missions : shuttle buses, tourism excursions, charter usage, school transport. Welcome on board the new Daily.
